ARRIVAL OF MAJOR GREERAL SHERIDAN IN CLEVELAND. - Dispatches were received in this city yesterday afternoon, announcing that Major General Sheridan, the victor of Pive Forks-the Waterloo of the rebellion -would arrive on the 9:25 P. M. train from day.

CLOTHING,

Eric. The news was made known only to a few leading citizens, though others learned it incidentally, the object being to do nothing to harass or annoy the General and upon the arrival of the train the number of people present did not exceed two or three hundred. No formal preparation for reception had been made, but the Military Committee, accompanied by Mayor Chapin and a number of prominent citizens, were at the depot to present their respects on behalf of the city. As soon as the train had entered the depot, Colonel George B. Senter waited upon the General, and conducted him to Wheeler & Russell's Dining Hall. Here the gentlemen present were introduced, and the shaking of hands being completed, with no other than the ordinery coremony, General Sheridan and the members of his Staff accompanying him, ant down to supper, which they were permitted to enjoy without interruption, the crowd being entirely excluded from the Hall. After supper glasses were filled, and Col. Senter proposed "The health of General Sheridan, one of Ohio's bravest and best sons." General Sheridan returned his thanks, but said he could not make a peech. The distinguished visitor was then conducted to the Columbus train, greated by the cheers of the crowd, upon

The General will go to his home at Somerset, Perry county, from Columbus, where he will remain a few days, going thence to his new rost of duty. His staff will go on to Cincinnati direct. The General is looking well, and his sharp, angularface, swarthy and sun-burned, together with a pair of the most penetrating black eyes ever seen, make up s contour which gives the impression at once that it is no ordinary man who possesses it, but one capable of any duty in which bravery and determination to succeed, coupled with judgment and skill, are necessary In size, General Sheridan is not over five feet six inches, but his frame is of that rolid, substantial build that defice any hardship. He is withal modest and unassum ng, bearing his honors with a quiet, soldierly dignity under all circumstances.

citizens' dress. ACADEMY OF MUSIC.-The announcemen that a dramatization of "Enoch Arden," would be presented at the Academy Monday and Tuesday nights draw a considerable number of a certain class, while representatives of a selecter class were allured there on both occasions by the assurance that the poem had been "successfully dramatized" by Madame Juliette de Marguerittes, and that we should be treated to a taste of the "success." Of the acting we have little or nothing to say. There is nothing abstruse or difficult in the character or career of the dramatis ersonac. It is life, simple, quiet, domestie life and needs only life for interpreter. Any person of ordinary intelligence, imagination and experience could easily form s just conception of the character and lot, whether of Annie Lee, Enoch Arden, or Philip Ray. It was, therefore, mere justice to expect that the personation would be adequate. We need not add, that in this repect the house were not disappointed.

But when we come to consider the merits of the dramatization, we must own that this effort ranks with the ninety-nine hunbe named either caricature or sacrilege. Will any one who has read that poem, whose mind and heart have been filled with the matchless beauty, perfection and simplicity of that consummate piece of art, pretend that the dramatization we saw the last two nights improved the poem, or even left it invio late in its high place? What trait of char acter or incident was touched with a softer tint than that the poet gave it?

The unity of the piece is not preserved in ue dramatization as it appears in the poem. Much of the poem, to be sure, is left, but it s so thoroughly watered with gratuitous chorus, dance, speech and other entirely foreign elements, that Tennyson himself would not know it. The story is not torn to pieces to the usual criminal extent, but we have superfluous characters, more than a dozen in number, added to eke out the siece, by their ridiculous speech and ection, respectable dramatic length. This is nurder in the first degree. If Parliament and Congress would only pass laws making it a capital offense to perpetrate dramatizations which do not prove successful and get universal approval ! "Enoch Arden," as Tennyson wrote it, is a gem, perfect in itself, like a star in its place. And to mix up the Lord's prayer, or the Bestitudes, with scraps of French memoirs or village gossip, would be a perversion not more blasphemous and monstrous than such dramatizations are villainous and sacrilegious. We hope we have had snough of this sort of thing.

As attractive bill is presented to-night n the sensation drams, "Streets of New Tork," in which both stars sppear, followed by the capital farce of the "Two Buzzards," he time of their arrival here several months since, the fact that six brothers, pearing the unique name of Jones, left their nome in Brunswick county, Virginia, about fifty-four miles southwest of Petersburgh, on the 18th of November last. They made heir slow, doubtful and painful way to the Union lines at Norfolk, and came on here, topping at the Soldiers' Home several days, until they found employment. None of the young men had been accustomed to hard manual labor at home, having been engaged in mercaptile pursuits and as eachers. But they set themselves resostely to the work they found to do. Five of them went to Grafton, Lorain county, and engaged themselves as wood-cutters. They had never lifted an ax against the great trees, and only one of them escaped cutting legs and feet. However, they persevered, and have made enough to clothe themselves in first rate style and pay their expenses home.

But they were not allowed to leave their ace of labor without having practical experience of a lawsuit. The man they worked for last, Mr. Alexander Carter, of Grafton, refused to pay them their stipulated wages, whereupon they sued him, and came off triumphant.

They left for their home in Virginia yes erday. They congratulate themselves that the war is at an end, that they can again go back to their home, parents and siness, and they express themselves vary jubilantly over the apparently certain and speedy doom that awaits Jeff. Davis, the author of all their won.

She was in the employ of Mr. William Rogers, a gardener on Cedar street. Mr. Rogers was walking with this and another the track when he discovered that the engine was very near. He had time only to turn to see if the women had remained on the other side, when he saw the locomotive strike the woman. The train stopped, and word was sent to Dr. Beckwith by the conductor, who soon put the train in motion for the depot. Dr. Schneider immediately repaired to the house of Mr. Rogers, to which the woman had been removed, but saw at once that she was sinking rapidly and past hope.

MORNING LEADER OFFICE, | 1 tumnar Evanue, May 13, 1865.]
So'd in New York was firm r to-day, and ad venced, the price closing at the afternoon Board at 132. In view of the recent large shipmonas amounting last week to over three million deliars, for which there is no replealshing movement, this is not at all surprising, the w nder being that it has not soomer occurred, which doubtloss would have been the case but for the anticipated favors coin can now and beoceforward alone cause a rise export of specie to Europe continues long at the present rate, that it must compel an advance by making gold scarce in the open market, as well as for the means of resuming specie payment at some future day. A result of the advance in glid was the substitution o'n firmer and stradier feeling in commercial circles to the decreas d and unsettled condition that has chause erized the marries for some time past. A better levil g also pervaded the general stock market, though without effecting material change. Governments are held pretly family, without decided change, and ruling rather
